Leader Of The Liberal Party And The Chief Of Police Are Shot Down.

JUDGE ORDERS A HOTEL SEARCHED

Sends Men To Find Hidden Explosives, And They Are Attacked By A Fusillade Of Shots In Return.

Havana, Sept. 23.—Congressman Enrique Villuendas, leader of the Liberal party and the most able orator in the lower house, and the chief of police of Cienfuegos were killed Friday during a conflict between the two political parties, the Liberals and Moderates.

The government advises from Cienfuegos say the police had information that within the hotel in which Villuendas resided a quantity of arms had been deposited, and they went to the hotel to investigate the matter. As the police ascended the stairs they were met by a party of Liberals, who fired on them, killing Chief of Police Illance. The police returned the fire, killing Villuendas and wounding several others.

As the news spread throughout Havana the Liberals and Moderates are rapidly gathering in their respective clubs, and it is feared that unless the leaders give wise counsel a clash may result.

Story of the Conflict.

A press dispatch from Cienfuegos says that six persons were killed and twenty-five wounded during the conflict. Dispatches to the government say that besides Congressman Villuendas and Chief of Police Illance, two policemen were killed, and a number of policemen and civilians wounded. One telegram says that Villuendas fired the shot which killed the chief of police, while, according to another telegram, the shot was fired by Jose Fernandez, a Liberal, who has been arrested.

A search of the hotel revealed two dynamite bombs in the room occupied by Villuendas. The police in searching the hotel were carrying out the order of a judge who was informed that explosives were hidden there.

The government has received a telegram from Senator Frias, asking it to send reinforcements at once. The telegram says:

"While in Cienfuegos at present the forces are keeping order, every precaution is needed, as there is danger of assault. I recommend that the authorities prevent the entrance into Cienfuegos of probable trouble-makers, who are liable to invade the city. There are fears of dynamite bomb throwing."

Troops Sent to Cienfuegos.

Acting on the advice of Senator Frias, the government sent a train of five cars, loaded with rural guards, the larger number of which are destined for Cienfuegos, while the others will be distributed in Matanzas and Santa Clara, where, it is believed, the trouble may occur at any time. The train also carries artillery, and the troops are supplied with 13,000 rounds of ammunition.

The feeling in Havana is most intense. The Liberals are bitterly denouncing the government, saying they have received no advice from Cienfuegos because the government will not permit the use of either the government telegraph lines or the cable.

Gen. Jose Miguel Gomez, governor of Santa Clara province, the Liberal candidate for the presidency, declared that an attempt was made to assassinate him in his official residence.

COUNTY ASSESSORS' REPORT IS READY

Eliminatory Races.

Hempstead, L. I., Sept. 23.—There has been considerable curtailment in the distance of the eliminatory races today for the American automobiles entered for the Vanderbilt Cup which will participate in the real race next month. The commission has abridged the trial from ten circuits, or 283 miles, to four circuits, or 112 1/2 miles. The statement has been given out that the distance was decreased in order not to inconvenience the Long Island residents by having two long races coming together. In the twelve entrants for the race, the Haynes car has first place.

JAPS DISLIKE TREATY TERMS

Heavy Rioting And Bloodshed May Be The Result Of The Official Misrepresentation.

FEEL THE COUNTY IS HUMILIATED

Great Indignation Prevails Over The Agreement Of The Peace Envoys As To Fortifying Different Points.

(SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.)

Tokio, Sept. 23.—A fresh wave of indignation is sweeping over Japan at the announcement that, in spite of Premier Katsura's assurance to the contrary, there does exist in the peace treaty with Russia an article by which Japan undertakes not to fortify Soya strait. The populace is aroused to a high state of indignation and renewed anti-peace demonstrations, accompanied by rioting and perhaps heavy bloodshed, is feared.

Eleven prosecutors and eight judges of the preliminary court, with several secretaries and policemen, made domiciliary visits to the Neroku Shimbun and the residences of its editors. It is believed that the action taken was in connection with the recent rioting. It now seems to be the government's desire to humiliate the press in order that it may count on the support of the newspapers in calming the storm now brewing.

Condemn Peace Pact.

The agreement not to fortify Soya strait is deemed among the influential classes to be the greatest humiliation Japan has ever suffered. The restriction thus placed on her territorial liberty is looked upon as being an unbearable indignity and as constituting the blackest record in the history of a country which has never experienced defeat at the hands of other nations.

The number of direct memorials to the throne from different associations and individuals, condemning the peace treaty and asking that it be not ratified, exceeds forty, among which is an address signed by six professors of the imperial university, one of whom was recently placed on the retired list owing to his strongly worded anti-peace thesis.

This memorial strongly urges the necessity of refusing to ratify the peace treaty and condemns it as entirely annulling the purpose of the war as set forth in the declaration of hostilities. It is also stated that indisputable reasons exist for refusing to ratify the treaty, which is deemed to be pregnant with elements of humiliation and future danger to the national interests.

In spite of persistent editorials in the leading newspapers demanding the resignation of the cabinet it is believed that the ministers will continue to hold office until after the adoption of the posthumum measures, especially those regarding finance and the Chinese and Korean problems.

Opposition to Government.

The constitutionalists gradually are assuming a firm attitude of opposition to the government.

The editors of the daily papers met and appointed a committee to make representations to the government on the subject of the unusually long suspension of the Asahi and four other evening newspapers.

A solitary instance of public rejoicing at the conclusion of peace took place at a meeting held at Koraka, a town in the remote northeast corner of the main island of Nippon. Messages of congratulation were forwarded to the emperor of Japan, to Field Marshal Oyama, Vice Admiral Togo and to President Roosevelt.

Capt. W. Boismann, a prisoner of war and former commander of the Russian battleship Peresviet, has died at Matsuyama. Rear Admiral Nebogoff and a number of other Russian naval officers have been permitted to give their parole and return home. Rear Admiral Rojestvensky has almost recovered from his wounds, but is still under strict medical care in Fushimi.

MAIL CARRIERS ARE NOT YET SATISFIED

Resignation of All the Officers of the Association Presented Today.

(SPECIAL BY SCRIPPS-M'RAE.)

Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 23.—F. H. Cunningham, president of the National Rural Letter Carriers' association; W. F. Tumber, secretary; W. L. Fetters, treasurer, and H. E. Niven and H. W. Aldridge, members of the executive board, resigned at this morning's session of the convention. Announcement came before the motion asking for the resignations could be acted on. Vice President Fairbanks spoke today at the opening of the republican campaign in Ohio. He said the republican congress will readjust the tariff whenever readjustment is essential to preserve the integrity of the system. The change will not be made for the mere sake of a change or to promote free trade. He admitted railroad legislation had not accomplished all it was intended to or all that was deemed necessary. He advocated a ship subsidy and said the President will rush the canal work. He eulogized Roosevelt's work for peace and the successes of domestic projects.

ROCKEFELLER FINDS IS AFTER LAND FOR NEW ROUND-HOUSE

St. Paul Road Make Application in Court for the Condemnation of Certain Real Estate for This.

In circuit court the C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co. has made application for the condemnation of lands described as lot 8, block 30, Smith's addition and a strip two rods wide lying north and adjoining said lot—being the south half of the vacated thoroughfare known as School street. This real estate is situated in the city of St. Paul and is owned jointly by Mary A. Bernard and John L. Nash and the petitioner desires to obtain possession of it for the purpose of erecting an enlarged roundhouse and extending its station grounds. It is recited in the application that the old roundhouse will no longer serve its purpose with the enlarged business of the new branches since the old one was built and the company asks for the appointment of three disinterested property-holders to ascertain and appraise the compensation to be made. The hearing is set for Friday, Sept. 29, at 10 o'clock.

Forty Years Ago.

Janesville Daily Gazette, Saturday, September 23, 1865.—The Hall of Fine Arts on the Fair grounds will be in charge of E. D. Hotten, Superintendent, who will take the list and care of all articles designed for this department. Any of our citizens who can contribute to the display of works of art are cordially invited by the society to report on next Monday and Tuesday to the superintendent on the grounds.

Railroad Accident.—A sad accident occurred in Chicago this morning we learn, of which we have only a few particulars. The engine Nevada of the Galena Division on the North-Western Railway, was made a complete wreck, and four or five men killed and several injured. None of the names are known to us. The engineer was killed outright, but the fireman was alive at 12 o'clock; not much hope was entertained for his recovery. The exact cause of the accident we have yet to learn. It is confidentially stated in Chicago, however, that it was an unavoidable casualty.

Don't Carry Your Money With You.—Some people who have not seen the elephant, imagine that although some fellows have been green enough in times past to lose their money by pocket-picks, they never could be so victimized, and therefore put their valuables in their pockets for safe keeping. But to all such, we would say, do not pay too high a price for having your eye teeth out. The light fingered gentry who ply their avocation in large gatherings, such as the State Fair is likely to be, will relieve a man of his pocketbook so quick it will take his breath away. Deposit your money or put it in some safe place, but do not trust much of it in your pockets.

Editors Gazette: Permit me through your columns, to call the attention of growers of flowers and fruit, in this city and vicinity, to the exhibition of the State Horticultural Society in connection with the State Fair next week.

The show of fruit promises to be very large and it is very desirable that there should be some cornucopia of floral decorations, to give that completeness and harmony that will render it an occasion of pleasure and associations long to be remembered. To this end we wait contributions of fresh flowers, evergreen sprigs, and plants in bloom.

All who have such collections are invited to bring them for competition or exhibition, early on Tuesday morning, to the Horticultural building, State Fair grounds. But contributions for decorations should be brought in Monday morning, and if not convenient to the Fair grounds, they can be left at the music store, Hyatt House block. Furthermore we want the assistance of several ladies and gentlemen, to make and arrange these floral decorations, on Monday afternoon. For volunteers in this work, conveniences will be provided from the Myers house at one o'clock p. m. Monday.

J. C. PLUMB, Superintendent Floral Department, State Fair, Sept. 23rd, 1865.

"The Train Robbers." Myers Grand Saturday, Matinee and Evening.

A. E. Davidson presents this season one of the strongest and most thrilling sensational plays ever put on a stage, "The Train Robbers." Each act is replete with startling situations and the clever construction calls forth unstinted applause from both pit and gallery.

"Parsifal." An imperative rule, which will be strictly enforced during the "Parsifal" engagement here will be that late comers will not be allowed to

of the drama leads up to exciting climaxes of each act in a natural and intensely interesting manner. Mr. Davidson has equipped the play with a generous complement of special scenery and electrical effects and no detail has been overlooked to make take their seats after the performance begins until the conclusion of the first act. Owing to the unusual length of the drama, the curtain will rise promptly at 7:45 p. m. Notwithstanding the immense amount of scenery used, the waits between the acts will be brief and the final curtain will fall at eleven o'clock. Following the Balthazar custom, warning of the approach of time for the commencement of each act, will be given by trumpeters playing "Parsifal" motif in the different parts of the theatre, including the lobby.

"The Runaways"

The story of "The Runaways" which will be seen at the Myers Grand on Monday, Sept. 25, is decidedly original. A retired army general is smitten with comic opera queen. The general is afflicted with dyspepsia. There is an island in the far Pacific where indignation is unknown. The comic opera queen has to win the big handicap at Saratoga before she can go to the island, she knowing the location. There is a conspiracy on the part of a "skin" doctor and "Blotch" the jockey to have the queen's horse defeated, but in spite of their machinations the horse wins. The race track at Saratoga, where the race is run, is shown in the first act. The second act shows the island of Table d'Hote in the Pacific. Here the troubles of the general multiply. Six widows want to marry him and he is constantly kept in hot water. There is a laugh in it a realistic performance. The Air Line limited crossing the famous Spider Web Bridge in the distance and it's later approach is a cleverly constructed piece of stage craft and gives a realistic and the scene which every line of the performance, rich mirth in the many complicated situations and keen delight in the pretty songs and catchy music. The production is the same as originally presented when it scored the big New York Casino success.

"THE TRAIN ROBBERS"

MAKE DEAF HEAR

So Says--Milwaukee Man Of The Famous Cooper's Medicines.

Hears Ordinary Conversation After Taking One Bottle.

Mr. Jacob Israel of 525 Center St., Milwaukee, Wis., is rejoicing over a remarkable cure which he declared was effected by the use of The Famous Cooper's Medicines. In speaking of his case Mr. Israel was enthusiastic in his praise of those remarkable preparations.

To talk with him one would indeed wonder that he was ever deaf for there is no effort whatever on his part to understand every syllable spoken in an ordinary tone.

To quote him, Mr. Israel wrote as follows: "I have been suffering for the past six months with deafness. A continual roaring sound in my head would at times nearly drive me wild."

"I had used one bottle of 'Cooper's New Discovery' and one of the 'Quick Relief' when I noticed a change. I began to improve steadily and now I can hear any ordinary conversation perfectly, and the noises in my head have entirely disappeared."

E. B. Heinemann, Mr. Cooper's special agent for Janesville, says that the sale of the preparations is increasing wonderfully.

The two medicines, Cooper's New Discovery and Cooper's Quick Relief sell for one dollar per bottle and fifty cents per bottle respectively and cure Kidney Trouble, Deafness, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Blood Diseases, Stomach Trouble and Paralysis.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

The question of old fashioned common honesty is demanding more stringent attention just now than at any time in the history of the nation.

Public conscience has at last awakened to the fact that the line which separates the criminal and moral code, is largely an imaginary line.

The courts of the land are organized and maintained to enforce law, but their peculiar mission is to deal with crime and criminals. The command, "Thou shalt not steal," is applied to the man who deliberately appropriates other people's property, and the value involved has much to do with the punishment awarded.

The man who burglarizes a bank, and in his desperation adds murder to the crime, is regarded as a greater criminal, than the man who steals a coat, yet both belong to the criminal class and are so regarded.

The fact is generally recognized that back of all law is public sentiment, and while the same code may apply to all localities, the degree of punishment and character of crime is largely a matter of local interpretation and sentiment.

The man who steals a horse, in the territories, stands at the head of the criminal list, and he well understands that if caught there will be no jury trial or court sentence. He may have killed his man, but that only makes him a hero.

What is true concerning the estimate and interpretation of crime, is more largely true in the realm of morals, where the only court which attempts to regulate, is the court of public opinion.

The code of morals in every community reflects the character of the constituency back of it, and is always as good as the majority elect to have it.

This is why polygamy flourishes in Utah, in direct violation of the moral standard established by every other state in the union.

A letter was received the other day from a Janesville boy at Reno, Colo., a mining town which is just now enjoying a mushroom growth.

Like all such towns it is run on the wide open plan, and he writes that one entire street is occupied by gambling houses which are open all night, subject to no regulation except the whim of proprietors.

This is the free and easy sentiment of the mining district where every man claims the right to be a law unto himself on all moral questions.

A western man recently spent a week in Boston. A sign in the first office which he entered, attracted attention. It read: "We do not smoke in the office," and he stepped outside to dispose of a cigar just lighted.

He also noticed that it was not considered good form to smoke on the street. The moral atmosphere on the smoke question was new to him.

On his way home he stopped at Oberlin, Ohio, and on enquiring for a drink was a good deal surprised when told by the hotel clerk that he would be obliged to run down to Cleveland or Toledo to satisfy his thirst.

He packed his grip and started for Milwaukee where conditions are not so rigid.

Public conscience, of which so much is said, is a sort of intangible thing, and the fact is sometimes overlooked that this public commodity is composed of the individual units which make up the community.

This is equally true of the state or nation. A state takes advanced ground on questions of moral reform, because public sentiment becomes aroused and individual voters unite in crusades along this line.

The nation, just now, is passing through a reform era, and the people, inspired by a president who has convictions on moral questions, and the courage to express them, are taking a stride forward.

Railway rebates, the beef trust, life insurance irregularities, and various other questions, vital to public welfare, are being discussed and ventilated as never before.

The signs of the times are hopeful, because there is a disposition all along the line to raise the standard of morals, and more rigidly enforce the principles of common honesty.

The rebate and the combine, which favors a limited class at the expense of the masses, are alike dishonest, and an awakened public conscience has set the seal of disapproval.

The conduct of the great life insurance companies which has heretofore gone unchallenged, is badly tinged with dishonest methods which will be abolished to the benefit of both the companies and the people.

The examination of President J. A. McCall, of the New York Life, has excited a good deal of interest as well as more or less surprise.

Mr. McCall has long enjoyed an enviable reputation for honesty and integrity, while his ability as an insurance man placed him at the head of the list with a company that occupied the same high rank.

His word had long been law, and the policy adopted and vigorously prosecuted, as well as the methods employed, was never questioned.

He spent money freely, as judgment dictated, for what he regarded as the best interests of the company, and no complaint was made of extravagance.

But the investigation has brought out some facts which seem startling, and many people are asking the question, "How could Mr. McCall do these things conscientiously?"

One item of $48,000 contributed to the last Republican campaign fund, has been the cause of more comment perhaps than any other.

When asked by what authority this contribution was made, Mr. McCall said that he was responsible, and justified his action on the ground that in his judgment the best interests of his company demanded it.

The money given away was held in trust by the company which Mr. McCall served, and was the property of the policy holders.

There was evidently something wrong with the conscience of this man, but the error was an error of judgment, which would not have occurred, had the company been properly safeguarded by wholesome laws.

Men in positions of great responsibility frequently need protecting against themselves. The question of right and wrong is as much a matter of judgment as of conscience. People who sin with a clear conscience, and many of them do, are sadly deficient in judgment.

The president had no trouble in deciding at a glance that Mr. McCall had no right to invest trust funds in his campaign, and he will not be satisfied until every dollar of this money is returned.

What the nation needs today, is more than an enlightened conscience. It needs to cultivate clear judgment based on old fashioned honesty, assisted by laws which settle many questions now left to the individual.

Dime novels proved the undoing of a boy at Quincy, Ill. He used a diamond to cut his way into a jewelry store which he burglarized to his heart's content. When arrested, his room had the appearance of an arsenal, with yellow covered novels in abundance.

The city of Racine has supported one hundred and thirty-seven saloons with a license of $200. At the special election held last week the license was raised to $500, which will probably reduce the number of saloons to one hundred. Temperance people won the day for high license by a close margin.

Iowa is to have a home for worn out Methodist preachers. Mr. Francis, a wealthy man at Des Moines, has donated $30,000, and the churches of the state will contribute as much more. The plan is to conduct it the same as a state institution.

Rev. Sabin Halsey, formerly pastor of Court Street M. E. church, closed a six year's pastorate in Fond du Lac last Sunday night. A union service packed the house, and a silver tea service, presented by many friends expressed the high appreciation in which he is held.

Mr. Connor's home paper, the Marshfield Times, suggests that he is the logical candidate for governor. That ought to help some. The only trouble is that the woods are full of men who make the same claim. The state is a little short of pinacles.

The band of hoodlums who are desecrating catholic cemeteries in the northern part of the state, are engaged in a dastardly business, and it is difficult to explain the motive.

There are more generous men than just men in the world, that's why so many good men go wrong in handling other people's money.

If the kickers will join the boosters, Janesville will have a boom such as it never enjoyed.

If Connors should be governor, what will become of McGillivray, Lengroot and the rest of the push?

Mr. Pfister may be moderate, but the Cream City contingency will discover that he is a slayer.

The new city marshal has commenced to make a record and the white light club is taking due notice.

PRESS COMMENT.

Madison Journal: There are people who are never of any importance except when they are late.

Chicago Record-Herald: Judge Hamilton, who got $100,000 a year from the New York Life, must regard Chauncey Depew as a cheap man.

Milwaukee Sentinel: District attorney McGovern and his assistants are in the position of a football team that has lost the ball on downs close to their own goal line.

Fond du Lac Bulletin: When a girl has to marry eight men to find "one to suit" her it is time for some one to start a correspondence school for the improvement of husbands.

Superior Telegram: "I guess I'll swear off using cigarettes before long—I haven't felt very well lately." So said Wm. C. Werner of Newark, N. J. who averaged 50 cigarettes daily. And the next day he died.

Oshkosh Northwestern: It is recalled that Governor La Follette owns a farm in the vicinity of Madison, but the kind of a harvest he is most interested in this year has little to do with farm products.

El Paso Herald: Preacher-novelist Frenzied Dixon is badly worried about what may happen when there are 60,000,000 in the United States. By that time there are likely to be quite a few whites also.

Evansville Review: At a recent meeting of the city council at Janesville, the present city marshal was ousted and William Appleby of Beloit appointed as his successor. Hereafter the lid will be placed on Janesville doings.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: The cruiser constituting the Canadian navy is firing at every American tug caught over the dead line in the fishing waters. Playing war with Uncle Sam is their chief delight across the border.

Elmore (Kan.) Republican: Every farmer boy wants to be a school teacher, every school teacher hopes to be an editor, every editor would like to be a banker, every banker would like to be a trust magnate and every trust magnate hopes some day to own a farm and have chickens and cows and pigs and horses to look after. We end where we begin.

Chicago Chronicle: John D. Rockefeller denies that he predicted that the country would fall upon hard times before the next presidential election and his denial is entitled to unhesitating acceptance, for Mr. Rockefeller is too shrewd a man to go into the prophetic business. The gift of frotelling the future is a prerogative of politicians and racing touts—and a few editors.

Chicago Inter Ocean: A Carnegie library in an Indiana town has been closed for lack of support. Here and there Mr. Carnegie made mistakes. He gave some towns pipe organs that should have had libraries and some towns libraries that should have had pipe organs. There were some instances, perhaps, in which he gave pipe organs and libraries to towns that would have been more greatly blessed with natariums.

CREAM BAKING POWDER

PURE—WHOLESOME—RELIABLE

MADE FROM CREAM OF TARTAR DERIVED SOLELY FROM GRAPES, THE MOST DELICIOUS AND WHOLE-SOME OF ALL FRUIT ACIDS

Its superiority is unquestioned.

Its fame world-wide.

Its use a protection and a guarantee against alum food.

Alum baking powders, their true character disguised, are urged with great effrontery upon the public. Their promoters are aware of their unwholesomeness, but the enormous profit in their manufacture, as they cost but two cents a pound and are sold at twenty-five cents a pound, or twenty-five cents for twenty-five ounces, overcomes all consideration upon the part of their makers for the health of the consumer.

Alum baking powders retard the digestion of food in the stomach, while cream of tartar baking powder promotes it. These are facts, and they are of serious import to the public.

Chicago Tribune: The death of the lion belonging to that newspaper editor in New Harmony, Ind., has cast a gloom over the entire community. Try a rhinoceros next time, brother. The rhinoceros is a strictly business animal and thrives well in captivity.

Exchange: Young men of the New York swell set no longer dance and the girls are frantic over the situation. When a youth is invited to a social affair of any kind he makes careful inquiries about the dancing end of the game. When he finds out that this is to be a feature he says "Goodbye!" He is willing to cut up a goose or sit out in the open air and sing songs or even go to the show, but he'll be dogged if he will dance with anybody. He is becoming so selfish that he will not even play cards with amateurs.

Madison Journal: There is some sort of a "carnival" headed this way. As we understand it, it consists of a series of shows tucked away on some back street and is not an invasion of Capitol square. So much protest has been aroused of late years that these latter "carnivals" have been robbed of much of their indecency and these traveling aggregations consist usually of harmless fakes which, beyond taking the money that other-wise would go to the merchants, make little trouble.

Madison Democrat: The investigation still going on in the affairs of the Equitable Life insurance company continues to bring out new and enormous frauds, running into millions of dollars. If the millionaires who have been handling the money of the policy holders were not millionaires they would land in the penitentiary. It is more than probable that when the whole story is out, if it comes out, that this insurance company is insolvent and the people who have poured in their millions of dollars in premiums will lose it. So far as the legislative investigation has gone the New York Life and Mutual Life are showing up but little better than the Equitable. It is not strange that those companies were hostile to Mr. Host's plan of distributing the surplus. The surplus was simply figures in the books and not in cash or securities that would bring cash.

A Romance of the Days When the Lord Redeemed the Children of Israel From the Bondage of Egypt

By Elizabeth Miller

Copyright, 1904, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

The room into which the young sculptor was conducted was too large to be lighted by the two lamps, hung from hooks, one at each end of the chamber. Down either side, hidden in the shadows, were long benches, and from the huddled heap that occupied the full length of each it was to be surmised that men were sleeping on them. Above them the slatted blinds had been withdrawn from the small windows and the morning breeze was blowing strongly through the chamber. At the upper end was another table similar to the one in the middle with a bottle of water set upon it. An Egyptian woman stood beside this table and gave the young man a wooden stool.

As Kenekes walked toward the seat a stronger blast of wind puffed out the light above his head. The woman climbed up to take the lamp down and set it on the table while she relighted it. The skirt of her dress caught on the top of the stool she had mounted and pulled it over on the wooden floor with a sharp sound.

One of the sleepers stirred at the noise and turned over. Presently he sat up.

Kenekes righted the stool and sat down on it, the light shining in his face. He saw the guest in the shadow shake off the light covering and walk swiftly through the door into the outer chamber.

Meanwhile the silent woman served her guest with cold baked waterfowl, olives, cucumbers, wheat bread and grapes and a weak white wine. Kenekes ate deliberately and consumed all that was set before him. When he had made an end, he paid his reckoning to the woman and returned into the outer chamber.

At the doors he was confronted by four members of the city constabulary and a Nubian in a striped tunic.

"Seize him!" the Nubian cried. Instantly the four men flung themselves upon Kenekes and pinioned his arms.

"Nay, by the gods," he exclaimed angrily, "what mean you?"

"Parley not with him," the Nubian said in excitement. "Get him in bonds stronger than the grip of hands. He is muscled like a bull."

The young sculptor looked at the Nubian. He had seen him before—

"Seize him!" the Nubian cried, and then he remembered, so suddenly—and so deeply that his captors felt the sinews creep in his arms.

"Set spare thee and thine infamous master to me!" he exclaimed violently. The Nubian retreated a little, for Kenekes had strained toward him.

"Get him into the four walls of a cell," the Nubian urged the guards. "I may not lose him again, as I value my head."

The guards started out of the doors, and Kenekes went with them, unresisting, but not passively.

The prison was a square building of rough stone, flat roofed, three stories in height. The red walls were broken at regular intervals by crevices, barred with bronze. There was but one entrance.

Kenekes was led through the doors, down a low roofed, narrow stone walled corridor to the room of the governor of police.

The governor of police was absent, but his vice, who was fuller and scribe in one, sat in a chair behind the great table.

When the party entered he sat up, undid a new scroll, wetted the reed pen in the pigment, and was ready.

Kenekes asked, "Wherefore am I taken?"

"For sacrilege and slave stealing," the scribe replied calmly.

"At the complaint of Har-hat, bearer of the king's fan," Kenekes added.

"Until such time as stronger proof of thy misdeeds may be brought against thee," the scribe continued.

"Even so. In plainer words, I shall be held till I confess what he would have me tell or until I decay in this tomb. Let me give thee my word, I shall do neither. Unbind me. I shall not attempt to escape."

At a sign from the scribe the four men released him and took up a position at the doors. Kenekes opened his wallet and displayed the signet. There was no doubting the young man's right to the jewel, for here was the name of Mentu, even as the chief adviser had given it in identifying the prisoner. The official frowned and stroked his chin.

"This petitions the Pharaoh," he said at last. "I cannot pass upon it."

"Send me to my cell, then, and do thou follow," Kenekes said. "I have somewhat to tell thee."

"Take him to his cell," the official said to the men as he returned the signet to the prisoner. "I shall attend him."

"I have but to crave a messenger of thee—a swift and a sure one—who can hold his peace and bath pride in his calling. I can offer all he demands. And this further: Keep his going a secret, for I am beset, and I would not have my rescue by the Pharaoh thwarted."

"I can send thee a messenger," the jailer answered.

The solid section of wall swung shut behind him, and the great bolts shot into place.

Some time later the bar rattled down again, and the jailer stood without, a scribe at his side. At a sign from the jailer the latter made as though to enter, but Kenekes stopped him.

"I have need of your materials only," he said, "but the fee shall be yours nevertheless." The man set his case on the floor, and Kenekes put a ring of silver in the outstretched palm.

"Fare me not in a faithful messenger," the prisoner repeated to the jailer. The official nodded, and the door was closed again.

Kenekes sat on the floor beside the case, laid the cover back and, taking out materials, wrote thus:

To My Friend, the Noble Hotep, greeting:

Thus from Kenekes, whom ill fortune cannot wholly possess while he may call thee his friend.

I speak to thee out of the prison at Thebes, where I am held for stealing a bond maiden and for executing a statue against the canons of the sculptor's ritual. The accumulated penalty for these offenses is great. My plight is most serious.

The pitying gods have left me one chance for escape. I find I shall nodder here, for my counsel is mine, and the demons of Amenti shall not read it from me.

The tale is short and miserable. But for the necessity I would not repeat it, for it publishes the humiliation of sweet innocence.

Suffice it to say that the offended is she of whom we talked one day on the hill back of Masarah; the offender is Har-hat, who hath buried me here in Thebes.

One morning he saw me at the gates, and, taken with her beauty, asked her at the hands of the Pharaoh for the hatefullest bondmaid pure maidenhood ever knew.

She fled from the minions he sent to take her and came to me in that spot on the hillside where thou and I did talk.

There the minions found us, and I would have looked upon I am further charged with sacrilege.

Thou dost remember the all powerful signet which my father had from the incomparable Pharaoh. He lost it in the hands of the king three years ago, abandoning the search for it before I was as young as thou art now.

So strong was my faith that the signet was in the tomb that when this disaster overtook me I came to Thebes at once to look again for the treasure. I found it, but some unknown mischiefman mine enemy discovered my whereabouts, and a third minion, who escaped my wrath before the statue that morning, appeared in the city and caused me to be delivered up to the authorities on the charges already named.

She is hidden, and I have provided for her protection, as well I may, against the wishes of the strongest man in the land. For her immediate welfare I am not greatly troubled. But, alas! I would have with her. Thou knowest, O my Hotep, the kinger and heartache of such separation!

If the Pharaoh honor not the signet herein enclosed, tell my father of my plight, let him know the decision of the king, and then shall trust to the Hithers for liberty.

Of this contingency I would not speak at length. It may be tempting the caprice of the Seven Sisters to presuppose such misfortune.

Let not my father intervene for me. He shall not grieve himself further than I have already asked of him.

Remember thou this injunction most surely. That it shall be last and therefore

The governor of police was absent, but his vice, who was fuller and scribe in one, sat in a chair behind the great table.

When the party entered he sat up, undid a new scroll, wetted the reed pen in the pigment, and was ready.

Kenekes asked, "Wherefore am I taken?"

"For sacrilege and slave stealing," the scribe replied calmly.

"At the complaint of Har-hat, bearer of the king's fan," Kenekes added.

"Until such time as stronger proof of thy misdeeds may be brought against thee," the scribe continued.

"Even so. In plainer words, I shall be held till I confess what he would have me tell or until I decay in this tomb. Let me give thee my word, I shall do neither. Unbind me. I shall not attempt to escape."

At a sign from the scribe the four men released him and took up a position at the doors. Kenekes opened his wallet and displayed the signet. There was no doubting the young man's right to the jewel, for here was the name of Mentu, even as the chief adviser had given it in identifying the prisoner. The official frowned and stroked his chin.

"This petitions the Pharaoh," he said at last. "I cannot pass upon it."

"Send me to my cell, then, and do thou follow," Kenekes said. "I have somewhat to tell thee."

"Take him to his cell," the official said to the men as he returned the signet to the prisoner. "I shall attend him."

"I have but to crave a messenger of thee—a swift and a sure one—who can hold his peace and bath pride in his calling. I can offer all he demands. And this further: Keep his going a secret, for I am beset, and I would not have my rescue by the Pharaoh thwarted."

"I can send thee a messenger," the jailer answered.

The solid section of wall swung shut behind him, and the great bolts shot into place.

Some time later the bar rattled down again, and the jailer stood without, a scribe at his side. At a sign from the jailer the latter made as though to enter, but Kenekes stopped him.

"I have need of your materials only," he said, "but the fee shall be yours nevertheless." The man set his case on the floor, and Kenekes put a ring of silver in the outstretched palm.

"Fare me not in a faithful messenger," the prisoner repeated to the jailer. The official nodded, and the door was closed again.

Kenekes sat on the floor beside the case, laid the cover back and, taking out materials, wrote thus:

To My Friend, the Noble Hotep, greeting:

Thus from Kenekes, whom ill fortune cannot wholly possess while he may call thee his friend.

I speak to thee out of the prison at Thebes, where I am held for stealing a bond maiden and for executing a statue against the canons of the sculptor's ritual. The accumulated penalty for these offenses is great. My plight is most serious.

The pitying gods have left me one chance for escape. I find I shall nodder here, for my counsel is mine, and the demons of Amenti shall not read it from me.

The tale is short and miserable. But for the necessity I would not repeat it, for it publishes the humiliation of sweet innocence.

Suffice it to say that the offended is she of whom we talked one day on the hill back of Masarah; the offender is Har-hat, who hath buried me here in Thebes.

One morning he saw me at the gates, and, taken with her beauty, asked her at the hands of the Pharaoh for the hatefullest bondmaid pure maidenhood ever knew.

She fled from the minions he sent to take her and came to me in that spot on the hillside where thou and I did talk.

There the minions found us, and I would have looked upon I am further charged with sacrilege.

Thou dost remember the all powerful signet which my father had from the incomparable Pharaoh. He lost it in the hands of the king three years ago, abandoning the search for it before I was as young as thou art now.

So strong was my faith that the signet was in the tomb that when this disaster overtook me I came to Thebes at once to look again for the treasure. I found it, but some unknown mischiefman mine enemy discovered my whereabouts, and a third minion, who escaped my wrath before the statue that morning, appeared in the city and caused me to be delivered up to the authorities on the charges already named.

She is hidden, and I have provided for her protection, as well I may, against the wishes of the strongest man in the land. For her immediate welfare I am not greatly troubled. But, alas! I would have with her. Thou knowest, O my Hotep, the kinger and heartache of such separation!

If the Pharaoh honor not the signet herein enclosed, tell my father of my plight, let him know the decision of the king, and then shall trust to the Hithers for liberty.

Of this contingency I would not speak at length. It may be tempting the caprice of the Seven Sisters to presuppose such misfortune.

Let not my father intervene for me. He shall not grieve himself further than I have already asked of him.

Remember thou this injunction most surely. That it shall be last and therefore

SAYS CAPTAIN

KIDNAPED HIM

Aged Man Claims He Was Forced to Become Member of the Crew.

CONSUL IGNORES HIS PROTEST

American Laborer Declares He was Shantaged in Street at Gulfport, Miss., and Compelled to Work on British Vessel Canada.

New York, Sept. 23.—John Powell, 68 years old, who says he was shantaged, will appear before Vice Consul Smithers to press charges against Capt. Munro of the British ship Canada.

The alleged capture of the old man took place at Gulfport, Miss. He escaped at Rio de Janeiro and followed the Canada to New York. The Canada paid off here and Powell found the captain in the office of the British consulate.

Powell described himself as a laborer engaged in handling lumber, his home address being Mobile, Ala. He was employed at Gulfport when the Canada took on a cargo of lumber there for Rio de Janeiro. She signed several new hands, it is said, the proper number being twenty-three men.

Forced to Board Ship.

From the streets of Gulfport about 9 o'clock in the evening, he declares, he was shantaged. "Twisters" were put on his right hand, he said, and he was placed aboard a tug, where, he says, he met Capt. Munro, to whom he protested. However, he was carried to the Canada, which sailed within thirty minutes.

Until the ship reached Rio de Janeiro the old man had to do his share of the work in wind and storm. The work came hard on him and he determined when he reached Rio de Janeiro to fight for his release. When the ship made port the captain went ashore to the consul. Powell followed. He declares he got no satisfaction from the British consul nor did he get any money from the captain.

Begs Food of Strangers.

The old man had to beg food. He hung around the docks looking for a ship to take him to New York, whither the Canada was bound. He found one in the bark Egeria. Rough weather favored the old man's cause, for it badly hampered the Canada, and almost on the heels of each other the two vessels arrived in New York.

Lawyer Abbott examined the articles of the Canada at the British consulate. He says Powell's name does not appear on the list of the crew, as it would have to be signed.

Capt. Munro declares the old man was not shantaged and that he is willing to pay him for the work he did.

WOMAN KEEPS LOVE LETTERS

Brings Breach of Promise suit Against Man Asking for Many Kisses.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—A letter with a large heart, drawn on one of the pages with words "Kiss me here" will be an exhibit in trial of a $25,000 breach of promise suit brought by Miss Cynthia Ferguson of Louisville, Ky., against W. H. Kennedy, a wealthy farmer living near Council Bluffs, Iowa. Other letters in which he addressed the woman as "My blue-grass belle" will be read to the jury. Kennedy advertised for a wife and Miss Ferguson answered and contends he promised to marry her. Kennedy is said to have asked 105 kisses, fourteen mince pies and twelve raspberry pies for Christmas.

HAS RIGHT TO TAX FRANCHISE

Minnesota Wins Suit Brought Against the Western Union.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 23.—The state supreme court has decided in favor of the state in the suit of the state of Minnesota against the Western Union Telegraph company to collect taxes on a $1,000,000 valuation of the company's property. The company resisted the taxation of its franchise, asserting that the state constitution did not give that right. The court holds that franchises of all kinds, although intangible property, are taxable under the constitution.

To Inspect Wabash Boats.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Solicitor Edwin W. Sims of the department of commerce and labor has written an opinion for Supervisor Inspector General Uhler of the United States steamboat inspection service declaring that vessels lying on the Wabash river are subject to federal inspection laws.

Bishop Potter Goes Abroad.

New York, Sept. 23.—Bishop Potter has concluded to go abroad. Despite the failure of the Subway Tavern, Bishop Potter is convinced of the soundness of the principle involved and will make a study of the methods used in London.

Noted "Plunger" Dead.

Markato, Minn., Sept. 23.—John Butler of Minneapolis, well known as a "plunger" on the Chicago and Minneapolis boards of trade, the maker and loser of several fortunes, died suddenly in this city.

To Succeed Chapelle.

Fall River, Mass., Sept. 23.—Bishop Siang probably will be the successor of the late Archbishop Chapelle at New Orleans.

The Detroit Merchant Tailors' Protective association declared a lockout against 150 journeymen tailors. Refusal to discharge nonunion tailors employed by several of the shops is the cause of the trouble.

TROPHY WAS WON BY HENRY CARPENTER

Janesville Lawyer Established Clear Title to Du Pont Cup in Gun Club Shoot Yesterday.

Attorney Henry Carpenter, by breaking 44 out of a possible 50 birds in the Janesville Gun Club shoot yesterday afternoon, won the costly silver trophy offered by the DuPont Powder Co. The title to the cup which he was to win was made especially clear by his voluntary offer before the contest began, to waive all rights won in the five previous shoots and declare the match open to all, the highest to take the prize regardless of past records. Nine men accepted this proposition, the three crack contestants being handicapped as follows: Casey shooting from the 17-yard line, J. H. McVicar from the 18-yard line, and Carpenter from the 15-yard line. There was a strong wind, an unfavorable condition for shooting. The scores were as follows:

	Shot at.	Broke.
William McVicar	50	40
J. H. McVicar	50	35
James Casey	50	42
Joseph Echlin	50	40
Charles Tallman	50	39
Henry Carpenter	50	44
Roy Pierson	50	41
M. Roessing	50	34
W. M. Eldredge	25	8

In a trial subsequent to the regular event of the day, W. M. Eldredge succeeded in breaking 8 out of 25 birds amid the wild acclaim of the spectators.

There is much speculation regarding an alleged gypsy and two boys who were seen near Beloit recently. The dissimilarity in the appearance of the lads has caused some persons to believe that one of them was kidnapped. While the younger boy is dark and swarthy, like the man, the older is fair-skinned, has light curly hair and blue or gray eyes. His physical proportions are rather delicate, and in general he has a well-bred air. The boy's clothing, too, was in sharp contrast to the coarse habiliments of his companions. The man carried an ugly black whip, which at times he concealed beneath his coat. Constables and others had been informed to watch for the three, but they have mysteriously disappeared. No publication has been made, however, of a boy being kidnapped that answered the descriptions.

Marion Advertiser: There is a lot of talk about building the Green Bay, Madison, Oshkosh & Southern railway. It takes lots of talk to get a big enterprise like this under way. But in this instance we reckon that there is a great deal of hot air mixed up with the affair. In other words, it looks to the casual observer as if to convey operations as if the above company were trying to work the Northwestern system into some sort of deal.

Exchange: The Catholics in the state at their recent convention in Appleton took grounds against the treating practice, which is good as far as it goes. An acquired appetite is the basal fact to be considered in dealing with the temperance question and all else is supplementary and inadequate, though well enough as far as it goes.

HUNTING LICENSES TOTAL TOO SMALL

Only 467 Issued Thus Far Compared with Over 1,700 Last Season—Heavy Fines Imposed.

Deputy Game Warden Drafiel was in the city again today and made inquiry at the county clerk's office regarding the number of hunting licenses issued. When he learned that they numbered only 467 as compared with over 1,700 for Rock county last year, he shook his head ominously and said that it wasn't all due to the five-year prohibition of prairie-chicken shooting without a license, "he said, "and no court is empowered to make it any smaller. Any person who is hunting, whether he has any game or not, must be arrested and prosecuted according to the strictest orders ever issued which have just been received by us. Two men were arrested over in Racine the other day. I have never yet had to arrest a man for not having a license, but I am afraid some are going to lose $50 apiece this season. And along with that fine, guns, game and ammunition must be confiscated and if the men want to hunt any more he has still to obtain the license."

BRIEF BITS OF LOCAL NEWS

William Tobin Case: This morning in municipal court the action of the State vs. William Tobin, held on a serious charge, was adjourned until this afternoon and he had not been brought up when the paper went to press this afternoon. It was thought probable that he case would be adjourned for a time and the man released on bail bonds for a small amount. He has been spending his time in jail since he was arrested on complaint of Mrs. Anderson last Saturday.

Rockford Auto Party: A Rockford automobile party consisting of R. L. Carmichael, Mrs. R. L. Carmichael, and Miss Wisconsin Carmichael visited in Janesville today.

Divorce Actions: A decree of divorce has been obtained in circuit court by Henry E. Herbert as the result of an action against his wife, Josephine Herbert. Eva S. Benjamin has started an action against her husband, Henry B. Benjamin.

Marriage Licenses: Applications for marriage licenses have been filed by Gerhard A. Anderson of Beloit and Elisabeth Holzapfel of the town of Beloit, and Jessie Pise and George L. Key, both of Beloit.

SENDING OBSCENE LETTER IN MAILS

That is Charge Preferred Against Edward Hobert, a Fire Extinguisher Agent Known Here.

On the charge of having written and mailed an obscene letter, Edward Hobert, a fire-extinguisher agent who recently spent considerable time in Rock county, is now languishing in the Milwaukee jail. He was arrested by Deputy U. S. Marshal Durbin at Junction on complaint of Postal Inspector Ralph Bird and must await the action of the federal grand jury which convenes Sept. 26. Hobert admits writing the letter to secret fraternities in Des Moines, but in extenuation of the crime relates a lurid tale about having overheard, while stopping at a hotel in Waterloo, Wis., two men relating how they hypnotized Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, and compelled him to commit the deed.
